EVERGREEN TREES

In recent years evergreen trees have increased in popularity to such an extent that no home is complete without them. They add charm and color to the landscape, especially in winter. The dwarf types are most suitable for planting about the foundation of buildings and their use in such places adds an air of beauty and distinction unrivaled by any other class of plants.

Our evergreens are grown especially for landscape planting where well developed plants are necessary for finished effects.

They have been frequently transplanted so as to develop sufficient root growth to enable moving successfully, and have been pruned to produce a thick symmetrical growth.

COLUMNAR YEW

During the past decade many new varieties of Taxus have been produced. From these new sorts, after careful trials, we consider the COLUMNAR yew, because of its distinct habits of growth a most valuable addition to the hardy yews. It grows extremely upright and narrow like the Irish juniper and can be used in many places where a narrow tree is desired and for a formal hedge, where compact line is required it has no equal. For foundation plantings it will be found most valuable.

EVERGREEN SHRUBS

Broad-Leaved Evergreen Shrubs hold their rich green foliage all the year round. Many varieties make a beautiful showing with their magnificent blooms. Most varieties are shade-loving plants which make them ideal for foundation plantings where there is little sun. Broad-leaved evergreens are most successful when planted in groups. A mulch of Peat Moss or leaves should be maintained the year round to keep the roots, which are close to the surface, moist.

BERBERIS Thunbergi Pluriflora Erecta

TRUEHEDGE COLUMNBERRY

U. S. Plant Patent No. 110 Propagation Rights Reserved

ERECT COMPACT
HEDGES
with LITTLE TRIMMING

Truehedge Columnberry is so perfectly upright and so beautifully pyramidal in shape that upon planting "Immediate Effect" hedges are attained—whereas from three to four years are required to build a satisfactory hedge from common Japanese Barberry.

Under natural growth this new plant is decidedly more dense and heavier with foliage than the common Japanese Barberry. The leaves also appear larger and thicker and of a much deeper, glossier and healthier shade of green. Foliage is distributed evenly and densely right to the ground. Truehedge Columnberry takes on richer and deeper fall colorings than the common variety.

Fruiting

Berries are very similar in color and size and hang on about the same length of time as on Thunbergi. If anything, this new Berberis appears heavier in fruit.
